Pretty Paws Care Tips:

Summer Clip Downs – If you get your dog clipped down for the warm summer months you need to be careful to not expose the dogs to too much sun. The dogs can become sunburn if you remove their long hair coat and over expose them to direct sun. Their skin is not used to being exposed to so much sunlight and the dogs can become burned easily. Also know that some normally long hair breeds can develop skin problems when they are clipped down.

Also, be careful with the brand of Flea/Tick protection that you use. You may want to consult your veterinarian for advise. There have been cases of dogs resulting in chemical burns from certain brands.

July Topic of Importance:

Blue-Green Algae in Wisconsin Waters

Wisconsin DNR has been testing and monitoring our ponds and lakes for blue-green algae for years and have had some very significant results. Blue-green algae exposure can be harmful or even fatal to people and animals. Dogs are particularly susceptible to blue-green algal poisoning because scums can attach to their coats and be swallowed during self cleaning. Animals are not necessarily more sensitive to blue-green algal toxins than humans. However, many animals, such as dogs and cattle, enjoy being in the water, even if there is an unsightly green scum layer floating on top. When such a bloom is present, animals may consume large quantities of blue-green algae if they drink the water, and those blue-green algae happen to be producing toxins, the animals can become very ill, and even die. Symptoms of blue-green algal toxin poisoning may range from lethargy and loss of appetite to seizures, vomiting, and convulsions. You can learn more about Blue-green algae on the website <http://dnr.wi.gov/lakes/bluegreenalgae/>

A great alternative to swimming in the lakes and ponds would be the Dawgs in Motion swimming pool!
